This year's display consists of two missiles.

Storm Forced Balloon To Land

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (UPI) — The crew of the balloon "Small World" said today a wild tropical storm forced them to deliberately crash land at sea on their attempted 3,000 mile "fiat" along Columbus' route to the New World.

The British-manned balloon left Tenerife in the Canary Islands on Dec. 12 en route to the West Indies but they made only 1,200 miles before the storm forced them to jettison the balloon and take their chances in their life-boat-gonola.

They were towed ashore Monday by a fisherman who spotted their gondola four miles off the east coast. Three men and a girl aboard had spent 21 days at sea during which they had drifted with the northeast tradewinds almost to their destination.

"Wonderful," was all Rosemary Muddle, 39, could say as she raced across Crane Beach here after the landing. Then Rosemary, her husband Colin, 32, Arnold "Bushy" Elliott, 51, and his son Tim, 21, described their experiences.

Whipped into updrafts "It was just before midnight on the third night out," Elliott said. "We were in danger of being swept up to 20,000 feet. It was becoming uncomfortable."

"The radio receiver, sleeping bags and even the razors had been dumped overboard because of the earlier danger of the balloon falling down. That came the greater danger. We were whipped into a violent thermal updraft and we might have been swept up. Down we had to come."

They said they saw only two vessels on their trip across, a submarine and a ship. No one saw them and at one point they were reported to have landed in the jungles of Venezuela. This report turned out to be a hoax.

Wants Fresh Water Bath

Percy Foster, manager of the hotel at Crane Beach where they landed, offered them anything they wanted.

Rosemary wanted a bath — a fresh water bath.

They had flying fish for dinner Monday night which delighted Elliott.

"One landed in the gondola, but they would not let me eat it," he said.

The brief and garbled radio messages from the balloon ceased soon after the balloon left the Canaries. Then at Christmas came the Venezuela report.

Elliott said their radio failed completely a few days out and they dumped it overboard. But he said they never expected to have to drift the last 1,800 miles of the trip.

The gondola was spotted Monday by the fishing boat New Providence which was captain, Costa Brathwaite, asked them if they wanted to land. They were four miles to the shore. They did it cost them $30.

Legion Will Work On Education

Mrs. George Williams announced today that the American Legion will spend much time this year in education and scholarship work as a result of so many qualified young people dropping out of school.

The American Legion has found that young people do not continue their education because of insufficient funds or not a sufficient desire for study, Mrs. Williams stated. Our scholarship program enables many of those in need of financial assistance to stay in school and we strive to create a desire in those students that do not tend to realize the value of a good education, she concluded.

Columnist Settles Down To Prison Life

JERSEY CITY, N. J. (UPI) — TV-radio columnist Marie Forrester settled down to a 10-day prison term for contempt of court today with three good books, a sharpened pencil and intentions of getting at least one good story out of her confinement.

The New York Herald Tribune columnist was committed to the Hudson County Women's Prison Monday for refusing to tell a federal court the source of a disputed news item about singer Judy Garland. She told newsmen her imprisonment would be a "badge of honor" in the battle for freedom of the press.

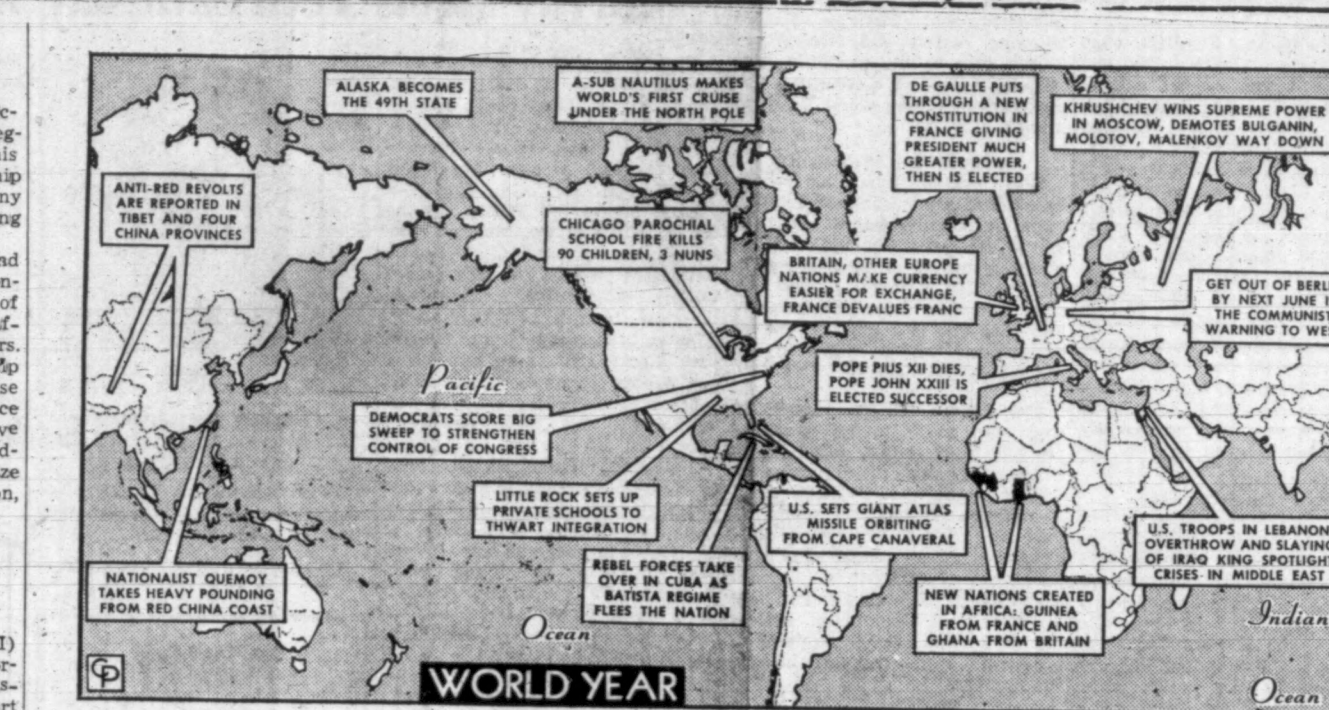

The 34-year old mother of two infants was booked, fingerprinted and clad in a blue-and-white striped dress. She was assigned to a three-bed room with a view on the seventh floor that is used normally for court witnesses of civil prisoners. She is the only occupant.

Henry B. McFarland said she will not come in contact with anyone charged with a crime.

She will have nothing to do but read and take notes, according to prison officials. Guest columnists will write her daily column until her release Wednesday, Jan. 14.

Firemen Are Called Three Times Here

Firemen were called two times yesterday and one time early this morning.

At 5:25 yesterday evening the department was called to the home of Mrs. J. T. Bynum at 312 North Sixth street where a bed was on fire.

This was extinguished and the bed was placed on the outside of the house.

At 10:15 p. m. the department was called to the home of Dr. Does at 1111 Main Street. A fire had been built in the furnace for the first time this year, to supplement other heat and apparently overheated.

The overheated furnace had caught the slits on fire and had traveled all the way to the roof. This fire was also extinguished with a minimum of loss.

At 1:40 this morning the department was again called to 312 North Sixth street where the basement was in flames. Both trucks answered this call and the booster tanks were used to put out the fire.

No large hoses were used in any of the fires yesterday.

Firemen were covered with ice in the 140 fire with the temperature down between zero and 10 degrees.

Fiscal Court Approves Action Of Board

The Fiscal Court this morning approved the action of the Calloway County School Board in regard to the construction of a consolidated school for Calloway County.

The county will sell the bonds, $350,000 worth, then in turn the system will rent the building for enough to retire the bonds in the period required.

At the end of the period the school will be turned back to the system. This procedure is necessary because the county is the one which must sell the bonds.

Chicago Daily News Sold To Field's

CHICAGO (UPI) — The purchase of the Chicago Daily News — the city's second top newspaper — in 28 months — today left Chicago's four large metropolitan dailies under two owners.

They are Field Enterprises, Inc., Monday's buyer, and the Chicago Tribune, Inc., publishers of the Tribune and the Chicago Herald-Examiner, purchased from the Hearst Corp. in October, 1956.

Marshall Field Jr., Field Enterprises president, announced the purchase of the afternoon Daily News from John S. Knight for $50 a share.

The estimated sale price for the paper's controlling interest, which Knight bought in 1944 for $2,500,000, was 18 million dollars.

The 481,293 outstanding shares of Daily News stock total more than $24 million dollars at the $50 figure.

Field said the Daily News would continue on a basis of "vigorous competition" with the Field-owned Sun-Times, the product of a merger between Marshall Field Sr.'s Chicago Sun and the afternoon Chicago Times two years after World War II.

Until Field bought the Times in 1947, Chicago had five major dailies, all separately owned.

The merchandising they started the Sun on Dec. 7, 1941 at the outbreak of the war and published it as a morning paper until January, 1948. The combination Sun-Times, published around-the-clock for several years.

The Hearst - owned Herald-Examiner changed its name in 1953 to the American, and three years later was bought by the Tribune ownership but continued as an afternoon daily.

The American was in turn the project of several Hearst mergers of the paper dating back as far as 1854.

Marshall Field Jr., new editor and publisher of the Daily News, cited rising publishing costs for his purchase decision.

Fuel Supply In Murray Is Good

Murray residents have nothing to fear from a fuel shortage, according to a survey made by the daily Ledger and Times today.

Apparently there is plenty of coal, fuel oil, natural gas, and electricity to keep the shivering residents warm.

The word was that as long as highways remain open there is nothing to worry about.

Most shipments of fuel oil come in by truck while coal is brought in by rail.

Natural gas comes into Murray by pipeline from Texas gas fields and of course electricity comes in to Murray from Kentucky Dam by the high lines.

Some complaints have been heard about the difficulty in heating homes during the zero weather, however this is caused, not by a fuel shortage, but by the continued cold.

Homes in this area are not constructed for continued sub-zero weather.

Rising temperatures tonight and tomorrow are expected to bring some relief to residents of the area with the temperature tonight, expected to be down to twenty.

For the past three nights the mercury has hovered around zero, just below and just above.

Most ice has disappeared from highways and streets with only dangerous patches here and there.

With rising temperatures there are expected to disappear.

No serious accidents were reported in the area due to the cold weather. Several automobile accidents occurred but no one was seriously injured.

Rev. D. W. Billington had one of the narrowest escapes the first night of the sleet and ice. He was coming into Murray from the east highway, when a slight dip in the road threw his car out of control on the icy highway. The car went from one side of the road to the other then R. 2, Farmington; Harold Arnold, 112 Ash; Elvin Crouse, Rt. 2, Miss Barbara Eldridge, 713 Sycamore; Mrs. I. T. Intense Cold Drives Into East

United Press International

A wave of cold, Arctic air drove into the East in the wake of damaging gale winds today, and the season's worst storm lashed the West Coast with heavy rains and 100 - mile - an - hour winds.

As the core of the cold air pushed into the East during the night, temperatures plunged to below zero in New England and ranged in the 20s as far south as upper Florida.

Wind gusts of up to 75 miles per hour in advance of the bitter cold pounded New York City and its suburbs Monday, upstaging two airplanes at La Guardia Airport and causing a harbor collision between a Staten Island ferry and a barge. Seventeen persons were injured in the collision, none seriously.

A wintry storm also battered northern California Monday, causing widespread damage and at least one death. Lawrence R. Osterlag, captain of a crab boat, was swept overboard in high seas and drowned in Humboldt Bay.

39 Weather Deaths

At least 39 deaths around the nation have been blamed on the weather since the storm hit during the New Year's holiday.

Kansas recorded eight deaths, Oklahoma seven, Indiana and Missouri five each, Iowa four, Illinois three, Wisconsin two, and Tennessee, Georgia, Louisiana, Pennsylvania and California one each.

The intense cold in the nation's interior relented somewhat during the night as a strong warming trend swept out of the Rockies into the plains, the Great Lakes, Ohio Valley and lower Mississippi Valley.

The cold air also brought heavy snow to sections of western New York state, blocking roads with six-foot drifts and cutting speeds on the New York Thruway for a time to 35 miles an hour.

A 60-mile-an-hour wind gust tipped a huge airliner back on its tail at La Guardia Airport. The 48 persons aboard escaped injury and damage to the plane was minor. The wind flipped over a light private plane, injuring Miss Carla Granow, 23, Des Moines, Iowa, a passenger.

A tree uprooted by the wind in Queens County, N.Y., landed on an elevated track, causing a half-hour subway snarl. The wind also ripped a 216-foot metal roof from a subway station.

CHIROPRACTIC LECTURE STUNS GERMAN MEDICAL DOCTORS

According to the reports in the German Newspaper, "Der Spiegel", Dr. Karl Sell, Chief of Staff of the famous orthopedic Sanatorium for the athletes at Allgau, stunned 5,000 German Medical Doctors at a recent medical convention by demonstrating a chiropractic adjustment.

All of the doctors present had never seen an example of Chiropractic and all had been taught that the bones in the spinal column could not be moved by manipulation or otherwise.

Dr. Sell made a careful investigation of Chiropractic theory and practice and was so well impressed with the values of Chiropractic that he decided to settle once and for all the debate around this subject which has been going on in medical circles for years.

Dr. Sell explained how the spinal cord passes through the spinal column and how the various nerves pass from the spinal cord to the different organs of the body and how a subluxation can interrupt this delicate system and cause disturbances to the whole body. He said that today it is a well known fact that changes in this spinal cord can cause such ailments as lumbago, sciatica, arthritis, intestinal conditions and paralysis of the extremities. Also changes in the musculature of the heart, as well as heartburn and various edemas were related by the doctor to be connected to disturbances of the spinal cord.

Dr. Sell stated early that he was only echoing the Chiropractic theory as he had seen it in practice. He also quoted the famous Swiss M. D., Professor Bincher-Brenner, who said, "Up to now I have not yet met one M. D. who could judge the spinal column half as well as a competent Chiropractor."

DWIGHT, Ill. (UPI)—The Dwight Elementary School has two sets of identical twins on its faculty.

Josephine and Catherine Wiegman both teach sixth-grade classes. They live together, dress alike and belong to the same professional and social organizations. They both graduated from Illinois State Normal University and earned masters' degrees from the University of Illinois.

Tom and Tim Hall are the other Dwight-faculty-twins. But they don't dress alike and they do not live together. Tom is married and has three children. Tim is a bachelor.

The brothers were graduated from Iowa Wesleyan, but then each went his own way. Tom did his graduate work at Illinois Normal; Tim was awarded his masters' degree from Southern Illinois University.

Tim is a coach, physical education instructor and eighth-grade social studies teacher at Dwight. Tom is principal of the school.
